Merry Christmas!

The holiday season is upon us and I hope everyone is enjoying wonderful food, great friends and memorable gifts. I've worked on much in the last few months and have a great deal more planned. I asked Santa for a special present that I hope to see by Christmas morning. (I might try to stay awake but he's chosen path. Ah, the writer's journey. Part introverted shut-in, part pushy salesman. Oh, the irony! 😊

My video posts are working well and I've successfully posted my IGTV shorts every week for the last two months. (Yay!) They are elusive, that Saint Nick.)

I have the trailers for my last five books uploaded and ready to go as well as a couple of pictures I can begin tweaking in the coming weeks for promotional purposes.

I will be working on Reflections In Darkness on January and will have it as my primary work for the next few months as I begin working on the promotional side of this definitely a challenge to create, but since I've started working on them, I am always jotting notes and working on the next one as soon as the last one is posted. What fun to put both images and video to words I only thought would become text boxes beneath pictures I've taken. Truly this is the most wonderful time of the year. Onwards! 😊

Fave Posts

My FB Fave this month is on the holiday. Specifically, where we are. As is often the case, I don't like to disclose personal information online, however, the wheels in my mind take interesting turns when I deal with that particular restriction on social media. 😊

Question: Where are you spending Christmas?

My Answer: Right here, on this planet. Holiday traffic is insane both in and out of the solar system. Plus, I can't get a Netflix signal on Saturn. How would I see White Christmas, Christmas Chronicles or Mama Mia? Nope. I'll be enjoying breathable air, fun movie selections and eggnog. (Love that 'nog!) 😊

What was that?

As I continue to post pictures to Instagram on a daily basis, I am reminded to keep my eye on the content I share. I intend to include mentions of my books this coming year but I don't want to make it seem that I have begun to spam my followers. For that reason I will be posting my book promotions with the same hopeful and inspiring words I've worked hard to maintain over the last year.

My words are my gifts in this life and I do not want to misuse them as I seek out attention and new readers. Onwards! 😊

My Insta-fave this month revolves around the holiday season. I originally intended to only put out one on Christmas day but as the weekend arrived, I just had to put out more. I hope those who enjoy my words and pictures will also take to heart my intentions: Sharing the encouragement to have hopes and dreams to overcome our yesterdays, improve our todays and live for our tomorrows. Onwards!

Whether it be this season or any other, may we all strive to be the one who shares a smile, gives a gift and spreads joy throughout the year.

Onwards! +

My IGTV shorts are still coming out and I am loving every minute of it. 😊

This month's Comic Video was about Time. I am constantly aware of the time taken for each task as well as durations of exercise, meals and entertainment.) Ah, Netflix, you double-edged sword, you!)

I hope you all have a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

May we find our passions, follow our dreams and experience the joy of giving all year. Onwards!

Where be me?

I am everywhere these days. Feel free to check out my social media outlets. I am happy to share all my hopes and dreams. 😊
